

CURTAIN RUNG DOWN
ON TELLEGEN PARTY

Brilliant Settings Feature All
Star Housewarming Programme.

MANY ACTS, NO INTERVAL

Worst Number Was Song by Geraldine Farrar's Father—
Loole Mann the Comedian.

At a recently late hour last night the housewarming party which Mr. and Mrs. Lou Tellegen (Geraldine Farrar) had begun to throw into high all over their new home at 20 West Seventy-fourth street on Wednesday night had begun to show symptoms of picking at the covers, things having come to a state where official announcement had to be made that the party was down to the grape juice.

Simultaneously the overflow, or subsidiary mothers' meeting, in the residence of Mrs. Lou Tellegen, 10 West Seventy-fourth street, or only five doors to the west of the Tellegen housewarming function, also began to sag. The mothers' meeting, which came into being when Mrs. Tellegen suggested to Mrs. Alma Gluck-Zimbalist that they pick up a few other interested mothers and dash over to the home nursery for a moment to see the new kiddie kroup equipped with shock absorbers and a man top, may be dismissed somewhat briefly here, inasmuch as the mothers' meeting necessarily was comparatively brief.

The Homer-Gluck-Zimbalist little ones, it seems, had received next to no attention since the beginning of the Tellegen party and the children were crying for food. Therefore as the day progressed yesterday Mrs. Homer and Mrs. Gluck-Zimbalist moved in due to adjourn, and after sending a telegram of felicitations to Mrs. Schumann-Heink the mothers' meeting late yesterday afternoon moved back to the Wednesday housewarming.

SARG'S MANIKINS ON ONE NIGHT STAND

Marionettes Set Precedent
While Breaking In for Premiere Here Tuesday.

FAIRE BINNEY DOES IT

Goos and Gets Herself Engaged as Chief Ingenue for Crothers Comedy.

Routing arrangements for freighting the drama about the country are now so perfect that even marionettes are playing one night stands. Tony Sarg's marionettes have been conducting what is said to be the first road tour of inanimate theatrical woodheads. This has been undertaken so that the all star cast of string pullers, prior to the Mannett premiere in the Punch and Judy Theatre Tuesday evening next, might have their parts at their finger ends.

The performances of the puppets in "The Rose and the Ring" are reported to have created a furore in Detroit, which is said to have just discovered Thackeray and determined to give him an abiding place in literature. The tour also will stimulate education at the University of Michigan.

It is only fair to the public to state that Clifford Brooks, stage director and actor, is aiming for the shores on the steamship Olympic, having cut connections with London, where he directed the English production of "Friendly Enemies" for A. H. Woods, after it had been translated into "Uncle Sam." Report around the Hoboken docks has it that A. H. himself will be returning from London in a couple of weeks with a trunkful of plays and a hatful of ideas.

FAIRE CATCHES IT TOO.
The Binney family have been going so successfully to see their young cherub, Constantine, in the leading feminine part of "48 East" in the Broadhurst Theatre that it was bound to happen that one of them should stray upon the stage. Now, Faire Binney, a sister, who is said to look like her first name, has been added to the Theatre du Jeune Binney by the Shuberts. This is in pursuance of the policy of engaging young leading women who have no name and have to extemporize their experience, for her only previous posing has been before the camera.

Binney will play the chief ingenue role in a new comedy, to be produced in a month, that Rachel Crothers wrote for her when not writing other comedies for her people.

Frank Wiltchuck, the cheering for the return to the stage of May Delia, the statuesque beauty of the Winter Garden, who, after leaving the theatre several years ago, has just come back to the limelight of "Monte Cristo."

The mat sale of David Belasco's latest production, "The Rose and the Ring," at the Broadway Theatre, has just come back to the limelight of "Monte Cristo."

The mat sale of David Belasco's latest production, "The Rose and the Ring," at the Broadway Theatre, has just come back to the limelight of "Monte Cristo."

Another Anderson production which will encounter the patronage of the "Mary Be Careful" the comedy by William Anthony McGuire which was placed in rehearsal three months ago. It is said to be a comedy of the "Mary Be Careful" type, growing out of a musical comedy which was placed in rehearsal three months ago.

Winchell Smith and John L. Golden have just engaged some more hired help for "Three Wise Fools," at the Criterion Theatre. The feature of the story, as presented by the two stars, is that they gave a returned soldier a job. The man they picked is Homer Hunt, whom they have recruited as a stage manager, a position similar to the one he held before helping to put on the war.

Masterlinck's play, "A Burgomaster of Belgium," will surrender before the spring invasion of new plays and retire from the Belmont Theatre tomorrow with all the royalties of war. For the following two weeks it will consider the cases of the Shubert-Rivera and the Maltzoff in Brooklyn.

Another start on the long trail will be undertaken by Otis Skinner at the end of the next two weeks. His final fortnight in "The Honor of the Family" now showing at the Globe Theatre, the date set is Monday, May 5. Mr. Skinner will be sent pioneering across the country and back through western Canada where the foot of Skinner never trod before, by Charles Frohman, Inc.

F. Fitzgerald, Jr., has bought an option on the rights to the play "The Midway Prolo" atop the New Amsterdam Theatre.

From the purple, poetic shadows of Texas Sam Hoffman's office drifted the announcement that the complete cast of "Look and Listen," the new dramatic novelty picked up by A. H. Woods, with Olive Wyndham, James L. Crane, William B. Mack, Florine Arnold and others attached, will go into rehearsal soon, prior to taking the upgrade at Atlantic City May 19.

ORATORIO SEASON CLOSES.
Final Concert Is Given in Carnegie Hall.

The final concert of the Oratorio Society's season was given in Carnegie Hall last evening. Owing to the absence of Walter Damrosch, who has gone to France to inspect the training school for military bandmasters organized by him last summer at Gen. Pershing's request, T. Tertius Noble, the eminent organist, conducted the performance. The work offered was "The Passion According to St. Matthew," by Sebastian Bach.

The solo singers were Mildred Gram, soprano; Merle Alcock, contralto; Laurence Murphy, tenor; and Edna Wrentham, barytone, and Charles Tittman, basso. The instrumental forces comprised the orchestra of the Symphony Society, directed by John H. Brown, and Frank L. Seely, organist. In addition to the chorus of the Oratorio Society the boy choir of St. Thomas' Church was heard. The audience was large.

Substitutes in Two Opera Roles.
Owing to the indisposition of Miss Rosa Ponselle, the soloist in "Stabat Mater" at this afternoon's concert at the Metropolitan Opera House will be Miss Marie Sundellus. As Thomas Chalmers is suffering from a severe cold Millo Pico will sing the role of Manfred in tonight's performance of "L'Amore del Re."

Large Audience Attends Final Performance of "Aida."
The eighth and final performance of Verdi's "Aida" for the present season took place at the Metropolitan Opera House last evening. Not only did the popular favorite draw a large audience, but Caruso sang his adieu for the season. There was a great audience, of course, but his enthusiasm was reserved for the full of his career. After the title role, Mr. Caruso's associates were Miss Musio as Aida, Mrs. Matzenauer as Amneris, Mr. Scotti as Amonasro, Henry Scott as Radames and Mr. Angelo as the King. Miss Galli had already made her farewell appearance and the principal dancer was therefore Miss Smith.

It would be unconstructive to comment on the quality of the performance. Much is left to the imagination at almost every Metropolitan presentation of "Aida," and much effort is counted upon to cover defects in details. But there was plenty of vigor in the proceedings last evening and the reappearance of Mr. Caruso as Radames gave an undoubted pleasure. Mr. Mondroni conducted.
